Course Description

The Developmental Individual difference, & Relationship Based model (DIR®) is a framework developed by Stanley Greenspan and Serena Wieder to assist clinicians, parents & educators conduct a comprehensive assessment and develop an intervention program tailored to the unique challenges and strengths of the child. This developmental, relationship based intervention carefully considers the impact of the unique individual neurobiological profile of the child and of caregiver patterns on development across functional domains. Participants will be guided in smaller group workshops through process based learning.

This training offers a unique opportunity to further enhance and deepen knowledge and understanding of this integrated approach to the child's sensory processing capacities, emotional development & developmental language acquisition.

This training has been designed in response to requests for extension of previous trainings. A prerequisite will be that participants have attended a Stage One Introductory Sensory Connections training. Participants will be expected to be familiar with guidelines and framework used by Mari & Kathy previously.

In this stage two, seminar model case presentations will be used as well as assessment and intervention case clips. These two days provide extended opportunities for professionals in case analysis, goal setting, & how to integrate this approach within your discipline, clinical practice.

Registration will be 08:30 am – 09:00 am on first day,
Program will run from 09:00 am – 5.00 pm each day.

Attending this training will enable you to:

2. Continue to build knowledge of the different impact of individual differences in sensory processing, language functioning, motor planning and sequencing by exploring cases with a range of profiles.
3. Clinically analyse how interactive relationships with caregivers can impact mastery of levels of functional emotional development.
4. Gain practice in translating the profile of the child and caregiver into a developmentally based intervention program with goal setting in a range of individual case profiles.
